THOMSON TAX & ACCOUNTING WINS THE CPA TECHNOLOGY ADVISOR'S TECHNOLOGY INNOVATION AWARD FOR PRACTICE CS™

DEXTER, MI, June 5, 2007 – Thomson Tax & Accounting, a business segment of The Thomson Corporation (NYSE: TOC; TSX: TOC), announced today that its practice management application—Practice CS—was honored with a Technology Innovation Award. Practice CS is a leading practice management application—providing tax and accounting professionals with a completely integrated workflow management solution.

“We are honored that Practice CS was recognized by The CPA Technology Advisor as one of the most innovative products serving the accounting profession,” said Teresa Mackintosh, CPA.CITP, Vice President of Strategic Marketing, Thomson Tax & Accounting, Professional Software & Services. “This award provides objective recognition of our ongoing commitment to enhance our software with advanced technologies and smart design to increase the productivity and profitability of practicing accountants.”

Thomson Tax & Accounting released a major enhancement to Practice CS in 2006—the Project Management module—which was key in receiving the award. This new module enables firms to manage and track projects and tasks from their desktops within convenient and organized digital dashboards, offering accountants unprecedented control over workflow.

“We nominated Practice CS because it is a clear leader in practice management software. Designed and written using .NET technology, the application offers advanced digital dashboard design and an arsenal of workflow tools,” stated Mackintosh. “The addition of the Project Management module advances the system even further in front of the competition.”

The Technology Innovation Awards were created to recognize significant advancements and innovative developments in software, services, hardware, and other applications, as well as advancements to existing technologies that are marketed to the tax and accounting profession. This is the fourth year The CPA Technology Advisor has hosted the Technology Innovation Awards. The Innovation Awards were announced at a reception in Los Angeles at the 2007 California Accounting and Business Show & Conference.
