THOMSON REUTERS RELEASES NETCLIENT CS™ NEXT GENERATION

The Next Best Thing in Portals Hits the Market

Dexter, Mich., Dec. 17, 2008—The Tax & Accounting business of Thomson Reuters announced today the next-generation release of NetClient CS™—their first-to-market leader in portal technology software for professional accountants. This release adds Reuters news widgets, as well as enhanced functionality, including the ability to share data in real-time, push invoices to clients and collect credit card payments electronically, upload multiple files at once, and more.

“By recasting functionality to enhance Web workflow, we’re taking portal technology and client service to a whole new level. Not only can accountants provide their clients with anytime-anywhere access to their financial documents and client software via personal, private portals, they can provide the data in real time, with fewer manual steps involved,” said Teresa Mackintosh, CPA.CITP, senior vice president, Professional Software & Services for the Tax & Accounting business of Thomson Reuters. “With Reuters news widgets, accountants can provide their clients with automatic news updates in NetClient CS from Reuters.com. The new paper-free online bill pay is efficient for the accountant and the client, and the ability to upload multiple files at once is a real time saver for firms.”

“Keeping in line with our main objective, NetClient CS uses advanced technology to help our users increase efficiencies, so, in turn, they can better serve their clients,” stated Jon Baron, president, Professional Software & Services, for the Tax & Accounting business of Thomson Reuters. “NetClient CS is the first commercial release of our next generation of Web products, which employ the latest Web technologies and leverage the power of the Internet to provide more sophisticated tools and more integrated functionality. The result is more streamlined processing and delivery of client services.”

NetClient CS offers accountants and their clients an ultra-convenient and secure means to access documents and software, transfer data, and convey information via private portals. The next generation products also include, Web Builder CS™, Web Employee, UltraTax/1040 Portals, Virtual Office CS™, and NetStaff CS™.
