THOMSON REUTERS RELEASES STAFF MANAGEMENT MODULE FOR PRACTICE CS®

New Software Module Offers Extensive Benefits Tracking, Staff Utilization, and Resource Scheduling

Dexter, Mich., June 16, 2009—Earlier this month, the Tax & Accounting business of Thomson Reuters issued a major release of their Practice CS practice management software that included the new Staff Management module. This additional module provides extensive capabilities for managing and tracking staff, assigning staff to projects, tracking benefits, monitoring staff performance, scheduling, and more.

“The Staff Management module fills the needs of any size firm looking to manage staff by pulling staff schedule, benefits tracking, and staff utilization information together in one location,” said Matt Jagst, Product Manager for Practice CS, Thomson Reuters. “Any firm can benefit by having a clear picture of what their staff is working on and who’s available. We look at it as a valuable management tool for all accounting professionals.”

With the Staff Management module, Practice CS users gain the ability to track staff benefits, set staff targets and compare those targets to actual performance, manage staff schedules, and more.

“This module brings full staff management capabilities to Practice CS. This level of efficiency is especially critical in today’s economic environment,” stated Jagst.
